15 Things You'd Never Tell Your Parents | TheTalko

Of course, you'd never tell your parents that. Instead, you'd just scramble to find a new job and act as though it was "what you wanted." You'd never confess that your ex-boss fired you because you decided it was a good idea to take a spur of the moment trip to Mexico with a random man you just met.

Hey Pandas, What's Something That You Can't Tell Your Parents ...

I can’t really tell anybody bc my best friend already knows bc she’s going through the same st, but it's all inside of me and nowhere else. I’m afraid that they’ll just pass it off as me being on the internet too much and trying to convince myself that I'm not okay bc it's cool.

What's something you can’t tell your parents? : AskReddit

I know where you’re coming from. I have a massive amount of credit card debt because of bad spending habits mixed with COVID and depression, as well as several medical bills. I can't tell my parents, because they make enough to be able to help me, but I would feel like I failed at being an adult if I didn't deal with it myself.

I can't tell my parents anything? | Yahoo Answers

Seems like when ever I tell my parents something "personal" they go all mad on me and freak out and get mad and or get sad, and make a big deal out of it, instead of supporting me. An example to clear things up = I was really depressed through grade 10, and when ever I tried to tell them, I was depressed and I was scared and did not know what to do in school, they would freak out on me and ...
